A Joke Booklet for Parkinson Voice Project People

This practice booklet is dedicated to our SPEAK OUT!® Therapy community.

Special appreciation goes to our talented illustrator, Gregg Hammond, and to our passionate patients, who generously shared their humor with us.

Some of these jokes are tried-and-true classics. Others are original gems straight from the hearts and funny bones!

Enjoy practicing with INTENT!

Man: Doctor, my five boys want to be valets when they grow up!

Doctor: Wow! That's the worst case of parking son's disease that I have ever seen.

This morning, I saw my neighbor talking to her cat. It was obvious that she thought her cat understood her. I told my dog this. We laughed and laughed.

I told my wife she should embrace her mistakes. She hugged me.

I love puns so much; I once entered a contest ten times. I was sure one of my entries would win, but no pun in ten did.

I had to clean out my spice rack and noticed that everything was too old and had to be thrown out. What a waste of thyme!

-Mike, Texas

John D. Rockefeller, Sr. was checking into a hotel in New York City. He told the clerk that he wanted the cheapest basic room possible.

A few weeks later, John D. Rockefeller, Jr. came to the same hotel. He told the clerk he wanted the largest suite they had. He wanted the best of everything the hotel offered. He emphasized that money was no problem.

A few weeks later, the senior Rockefeller was back at the hotel. The same clerk was on duty. Again, Mr. Rockefeller, Sr. emphasized he wanted the least expensive room they offered.

The clerk then told Mr. Rockefeller that his son had recently checked in. The clerk told Mr. Rockefeller, Sr. he didn't understand why Mr. Rockefeller, Sr. wanted only the cheapest room, but his son wanted only the best and most expensive room. Mr. Rockefeller said, "He has a rich daddy, and I don't."

-Schuyler, Texas

It's weird being the same age as old people.

Just once, I want a username and password prompt to respond
CLOSE ENOUGH.

There's a fine line between a numerator and a denominator.
Only a fraction of people will find this funny.

Two New Yorkers were driving through Iowa. They were amazed at how much corn there was and wondered what in the world they did with it all.

One of the New Yorkers said, "There's a farmer—I'll go ask him." He approached the farmer and asked what they did with all the corn. The farmer said, "Well, we eat what we can, and what we can't, we can."

He came back to the car in a few minutes, and the other New Yorker asked, "Did you ask him?" "Yes, it's the darnedest thing. He said they ate what they could, and what they couldn't, they could."
